Freedom from disturbing emotions

With Geshe Tenzin Namdak

What would it mean to be free from anger, attachment, anxiety, jealousy and other disturbing emotions? Buddhism teaches that these states are not fixed parts of who we are. They arise from causes and conditions that can be understood and gradually undone.

This one-day retreat introduces the Buddhist understanding of nirvana, genuine freedom from mental suffering and its causes. Through teachings, guided meditation and reflection, participants will examine how disturbing emotions arise, why they affect us so strongly, and how wisdom and compassion can help loosen their hold.

Saturday, July 4th,
10:00 am – 3:00 pm

Schedule:
→ Session 1: 10:00 – 11:30
→ Session 2: 12:00 – 13:00
→ Session 3: 14:00 – 15:15
